In this period I'm integrating myself in the Open Source developer community. Wait... more in the Zero Euro for hour translators. I started with the corrected itlian version of Bernard Gilly's
 mXcomment
, the extension used in this site for the articles comments. Between there is Joom!fish (already translated by someone, I know... but only language files), as i detailed in yesterday's article, while the new entry is AlphaUserPoints, another extension from the programmer of mXcomment. AlphaUserPoints is a Referral User Point System, a component allowing the creation of users communities that earn points sharing some contents, inviting new users to read and/or register and recommending users/contents. Cumulating those points they can change their level climbing the Joomla! stair and pass from "user" to "author" to "editor" to "publisher"...

I put here the software, sending you to the developer site for more information or updated versions. The component is made of 4 parts:

1) AlphaUserPoint , the component itself;

2) MostActiveUser , an aggiuntive module listing most active users;

3) LastPointsEarnedBy , another module listing last points earned;

4) MostReferralUser , the module listing most referral users.
